BEACH HOUSE

Q&A to follow w/ writer/director Jason Saltiel '04 & writer/producer Matt Simon '04!

When Paul arrives at her family's beach house, he draws the attention of college student Emma. There's something off about the surprise visit of this handsome photographer from her mother's past. Yet Emma, an aspiring writer chafing at her privileged confines, also finds herself intrigued. As her attraction to him grows, she makes unsettling discoveries – and among his things finds violent Polaroids that plant dark ideas in her mind.

(dir. Jason Saltiel '04, writer/producer Matt Simon '04; 2017, 86 min, United States, DCP)

"With icy precision reminiscent of Claude Chabrol, Saltiel captures the social intricacies of affluent leisure." -- The Village Voice

Jason Saltiel '04 studied under Josh Gibson at Duke, and made several short films, including "Undress Me" (winner, Hal Kammerer award for outstanding achievement in film). Beach House is his first feature. Jason directed, co-wrote the script, edited, and composed the soundtrack.

Matt Simon '04 received a degree in English from Duke, with a certificate in Film/Video/Digital. At Duke he studied film production, programmed films for Freewater Presentations, and participated in Duke in LA. After Duke, Matt worked for several years in New York's independent film industry before turning to producing on his own. He has a J.D. from UCLA School of Law, specializing in Entertainment, Media, and Intellectual Property. He lives in LA with his wife.

Sponsored by the Program in the Arts of the Moving Image (AMI), the Duke Entertainment, Media and Arts Network (DEMAN), the Duke Alumni Association (DAA), and the Vice Provost for the Arts.
